Attachment-Focused Therapy: Dyadic Developmental Psychotherapy with Dan Hughes, Ph.D.

Thursday, December 6, 2007

See Page 3 for further details on registering for this training

Children with serious psychological problems secondary to histories of abuse, neglect, and/or multiple placements provide a serious challenge to parents and therapists. For the past 20 years Dr. Hughes has specialized in the treatment of children who manifest serious deficits in their emotional, cognitive, and behavioral development, and at the same time demonstrate considerable difficulty establishing and maintaining secure attachment relationships.

Dr. Hughes' treatment is family based and focused on facilitating the child's ability to establish a secure attachment with his/her caregivers. Developmental attachment theory and research is the primary model for relationship development and trauma resolution. Dr. Hughes blends various approaches in his treatment modality. He actively communicates empathy and acceptance of the individual child while providing him/her with the comforting and containment needed to explore and resolve past trauma and shame-related experiences. At the same time he actively facilitates the child's ability to form positive, reciprocal relationships with his/her parents. Within the safety of these relationships, the child is able to finally face and resolve his/her past traumas, and, as the child gradually develops a secure attachment with his/her caregivers, (s)he develops a positive and integrated sense of self.

Dr. Hughes received his Ph.D. in clinical psychology from Ohio University, with a clinical internship at the University of Rochester Medical School. He is a member of the American Psychological Association (APA), the Society for Research in Child Development (SRCD), and the Association for Treatment and Training in the Attachment of Children (ATTACH). He consults with various mental health, social service, and residential treatment agencies in Maine and in other states and countries. Dan is the author of Facilitating Developmental Attachment (1997) and Building the Bonds of Attachment, 2nd Ed 2006, both published by Jason Aronson Publishing Company. He conducts weekly training sessions for therapists at Colby College in Waterville, ME, every summer.

November is National Adoption Month

HEART GALLERY of Oregon

For more information, visit the Heart Gallery of Oregon web site at:

www.heartgalleryoregon.org

November features a month-long display of compelling portraits of adoptable Oregon children from the Heart Gallery of Oregon. The Heart Gallery is based on the simple truth that a picture is worth a thousand words.

Dozens of professional photographers have donated their time and talent to capture the spirit and personality of foster children who are waiting to find a forever home. The photos will be displayed at Powell's Basil & Hallward Gallery.

Join us on Thursday, November 1st

ORPARC Open House...and...Heart Gallery Educational Forum

4:00 to 7:00 p.m.

Open House for adoptive families & professionals hosted by ORPARC!

Stop by the ORPARC office to meet our staff and browse our library before attending the Heart Gallery forum at Powell's. Our office is conveniently located on the MAX line in front of Pioneer Square. Parking Garages are also nearby for easy access to both ORPARC and Powell's. Please call us for directions & information. Pizza and refreshments will be provided.

Forum begins at 7:30 p.m.

To kick off National Adoption Month, the "Kids Can't Wait" educational forum will be hosted by Powell's City of Books (1005 West Burnside Street). The forum will address how no child should grow up without a permanent and loving home, what it's like to wish for an adoptive family, and how agencies are working to find families for children. The forum will be moderated by Multnomah County Commissioner Dan Saltzman and will feature adopted children and family members, DHS Director Bruce Goldberg, Multnomah County Circuit Court Judge Nan Waller, and Melissa Smith-Hohnstein of Kinship House. The panel will also explore ways that communities can connect waiting children with the homes they need.

National Adoption Day is November 17, 2007

National Adoption Day is a collective national effort to raise awareness of the 114,000 children in foster care waiting to find permanent, loving families. For the last eight years, National Adoption Day has made the dreams of thousands of children come true by working with courts, judges, attorneys, adoption professionals, child welfare agencies and advocates to finalize adoptions and find permanent, loving homes for children in foster care. Voice for Adoption is a collaborating organization of National Adoption Day. The National Adoption Day website has information about ways to participate in events in your area, and also allows organizations to register the events that they are planning. Visit www.nationaladoptionday.org for more information.

Forever Fingerprints: An Amazing Discovery for Adopted Children

This amazing book can help adoptive parents open this communication with their children. Author Sherrie Eldridge, an adoptee herself, has marvelous insight to share with adoptive parents and children. This book honors children's pasts and will help parents support their child's own healing process through the story and with parent tools and activities. Sherrie Eldridge and her publisher have designed a program to help children around the U.S. discover adoption. Visit the web site www.emkpress.com/fingerprintreading.html to receive details of how you can receive a free book if you volunteer to read it at your local library on Saturday, November 17, 2007 for National Adoption Day.

Information & Advice for Adoptive Families

Recently Passed Legislation on Higher Education to Benefit Children Adopted from Foster Care

On September 27, President Bush signed the College Cost Reduction and Access Act (HR 2669), which includes the Fostering Adoption to Further Student Achievement Act amendment—legislation that makes it possible for teens in foster care to be adopted without losing access to college financial aid. Under the new law, youth who are adopted after their 13th birthday will not have to include their parents' income when determining their eligibility for financial aid.

As Senator Norm Coleman (R-MN) explained when he first introduced the legislation in 2005, “[I]f a teenager is adopted, he or she can lose out on...college financial aid [due to] his or her adopted parents' financial situation, but if the teen stays in the system and ‘ages-out’...he or she is probably eligible for all available loans and grants.... The benefits of family and education should go hand in hand, not stand in opposition to each other.”

NACAC has met foster youth who had to make the terrible choice between having a permanent family and pursuing a college education. As a teenager, Sheila lived in foster care with her aunt. She knew that if she remained in foster care, she would receive enough financial assistance to enable her to go to college. “If my aunt adopted me,” Sheila explained, “I would lose my benefits. I mean adoption is great and everything, but you sacrifice a lot.”

We are delighted that Congress has eliminated one barrier that would have forced some youth to choose between education and a permanent family. Next Congress should ensure that all former foster youth who are adopted as teens have full access to needed educational support.

Advice from Adoptive Parent Support Groups about Running Away

Tips for the parents of a child who is threatening to run away. Do the following calmly, in a quiet voice.

1. Do not say “There’s the door,” or otherwise give permission.
2. Do not help them pack.
3. Do tell the child he/she does not have permission and leaving the house will result in consequences. Make sure the child knows there will be consequences and that you will follow through.
4. Do tell the child that you love him or her, that this is home and it is where he or she belongs.
5. Do be firm but do not get into a physical struggle.
6. Do engage the youth in conversation about what is upsetting him or her.
 - Refrain from responding defensively or in anger.
 - Let the child vent as long as there is no violence.
 - Agree that life can be frustrating, empathize.
 - Again, if you are too angry, call in an objective party to help calm the situation.
 - Ask for alternative solutions from the child or offer alternatives.
7. Remember, it is more important to keep the child safe for the moment than to confront them about their shortcomings, mistakes, and behaviors.
8. After the situation is under control, go to your “safe place,” turn on some soothing music, and take a nice long bath. Tomorrow is another day.

Excerpt from the book Wasn't Love Supposed to Be Enough? Biographies of a Long-Term Adoptive Parent Support Group and Services for Adoptive Families, by VanSlyck, Wristen, Dupre-Clarke, Magee, Haggerty.

Insurance for children at placement

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 (OBRA '93), Public Law 103-66, amended the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA). The amended law requires that any group health plan which provides coverage for dependent children must provide benefits to a child placed for adoption under the same terms and conditions as apply to a child who is the biologic child of a plan participant. OBRA '93 specifically eliminated any requirement that the adoption be finalized in court before there is coverage.

New in the Library

The following titles are recently acquired materials now available in our lending library.

Books for Children and Teen

- The Heart Knows Something Different: Teenage Voices from the Foster Care System More than three dozen personal narratives were written by 15- to 20-year-olds who have lived in the foster care system and provide a sense of normalcy and community to adopted adolescents.
- Oliver: A Story About Adoption In this picture book for children, 4-8, Oliver, who is adopted, imagines a much better life living with his birth parents. Then his parents, who are not adopted, tell him that they used to imagine that they were adopted, dreaming about the exciting world their birth parents might be living. In the end, Oliver realizes that his life is pretty good.

Books for Parents

- Beneath a Tall Tree This memoir begins with author, Jean Strauss's childhood as an adoptee and her difficult relationship with her adoptive brother. She proceeds to her search for and reunite with her birth mother, her birth grandmother, her 7 siblings, and birth father.
- The No-Cry Discipline Solution: Gentle Ways to Encourage Good Behavior Without Whining, Tantrums, and Tears While this book for parents of 2- to 8-year-olds does not focus on children with special needs, there may still be usable tidbits.
- Reflection Pond Through allegory, parable, poetry and prose, Jaiya John, author of Black Baby White Hands, draws from the natural world around us to unveil the magical inner life of children and youth. Here is a revelatory positioning of the human mirror.

Books for Parents and Professionals

- Beyond Consequences, Logic, and Control: A Love Based Approach to Helping Attachment-Challenged Children With Severe Behaviors The middle part of this three part book devotes a chapter each to "Parents Appear Hostile and Angry," "Lying," "Stealing," "Hoarding and Gorging," "Aggression," "Defiance," and "Lack of Eye Content." It might be useful for any one of those chapters.
- Handbook of Adoption: Implications for Researchers, Practitioners, and Families This book addresses the many dimensions of adoption-related issues—transracial adoption, foster care, single parents, special needs, training and education issues, assessment and treatment issues, and much more—which affect adoption triad members.
- Nurturing Adoptions: Creating Resilience after Neglect and Trauma A guide for parents & professionals helping children affected by neglect and trauma, and demonstrates the effects on brain and emotional development of neglect and trauma and how to recognize them, and suggests approaches at home and school that help children to flourish.
- One Small Boat: The Story of a Little Girl, Lost Then Found From the author of Another Place at the Table, this book focuses on five-year-old Daisy, one of the numerous children the Harrisons have taken in over the years. It is a story of real people, warts and all, who struggle to bring a safe haven to children who have endured extraordinary hardships and of the realities of the systems in place to protect them.
- Treating Explosive Kids: The Collaborative Problem-Solving Approach This book for clinicians, by Ross Greene, based on the approach he popularized in The Explosive Child, provides a framework for effective, individualized intervention with highly oppositional children and their families.
- Unconditional Parenting: Moving from Rewards and Punishments to Love and Reason Alfie Kohn questions why parenting literature focuses on compliance and quick fixes, and points out that docility and short-term obedience are not what most parents desire of their children in the long run. He suggests helping kids solve problems, providing them with choices, and using reason and humor.
- The Wonder of Boys: What Parents, Mentors, and Educators Can Do to Shape Boys into Exceptional Men Michael Gurian asserts that the biological and neurological differences between boys and girls need to be accounted for and nourished in order to raise healthy, happy boys.

CDS

- Beneath the Mask: Understanding Adopted Teens (CD) 2007 NACAC Conference presenter Debbie Riley addresses complexities of adolescence for the adopted teen – identity, abandonment, grief and loss, relinquishment – and how adolescence affects personal and family development.
- How to Keep Stress from Managing Us (CD) NACAC Conference presenter, Maris Blechner, looks at how caring and over-stressed people like us can leash those fire-breathing dragons in our lives, and keep them in their place.
- Parenting Adolescents with Attachment Difficulties (CD) Interruptions that occur early in childhood cause specific difficulties in adolescence. This presentation examines attachment problems and adolescence from a developmental perspective and presents strategies for parenting and treating adolescents who have experienced such interruptions.
- What My White Parents Didn't Know and Why I Am OK in Spite of It (CD) Transracially adopted presenters at the 2007 NACAC Conference offer firsthand experiences and practical ideas related to race and diversity challenges within adoption and foster care that transracial adoptees face., including dating and dealing with racial jokes.

VHS/DVDS

- Kinship Care: Relative Caregivers Speak Out (VHS) A panel of relative caregivers discuss the emotional and transitional issues they and the children experienced as a kinship family.
- Kinship Care: Teens and Young Adults Speak Out (VHS) A panel of young people discuss how they felt about living with relatives, and not with their parents.
- The Adoption Trilogy: Three films by Jean Strauss (DVD) Three short documentaries from Jean Straus, the author of Birthright and Beneath a Tall Tree.
- Unconditional Parenting: Moving from Rewards and Punishments to Love and Reason (DVD) See explanation under "Books for Parents and Professionals."

Help AdoptUsKids Find More Media Families Nationwide

Adoptive families themselves are the best voices for adoption!

AdoptUsKids is dedicated to increasing the public awareness of children in foster care who are available for adoption, and members of the Adoption Exchange Association are an important part of the national media outreach. AdoptUsKids receives many requests from radio, television and print reporters across the country and there are available spokesfamilies who are willing to participate in these interviews. However, there is still a need for more families! If you are interested in becoming an AdoptUsKids spokesfamily or if you know of an experienced family with adoption and foster care, please contact Kate Kirkpatrick at (717) 545-5251 or e-mail kkirkpatrick@adoptuskids.org.
